ELECTION '84

A former President recommends changes in the traditional way TV covers the two parties' nominating conclaves

By Gerald R. Ford

The four-day Democratic National Convention meets in San Francisco beginning on Monday, July 16. See the "Convention Guide" in the listings section for details.

Television has undeniably changed the face of American politics. Appearances by candidates on nightly news programs have become the successors to the whistle stop and the stump speech. This spring, we watched Democratic hopefuls sprint from state to state, sometimes stopping only long enough to hold airport press conferences for local TV news outlets in lieu of the time-honored political traditions of door-to-door campaigning and "pressing the flesh" at plant gates. More money is spent on television than any other aspect of political campaigning. Media advisers have become more important to campaigns than other staffers. And their fees, which can reach millions, reflect that importance.

There is one area, however, in which television's role has not been considered as much as it might: the national political conventions. My colleagues both in politics and the media may not like what I'm about to suggest, but I think it's time Republicans, Democrats and the networks take a hard look at how these conventions are put on—and make some changes.

The basic formats viewers will see this week in San Francisco when the Democrats convene, and next month (Aug. 20-23) when the Republicans are in Dallas, have not changed since long before electronic news-gathering. In the old days, the four-day schedule was necessary: some delegates had no other chance to hear the candidates talk about the issues or their positions on national policy. Today, with the profusion of polls, reports on morning and evening news programs, and televised debates, the delegates know where each candidate stands, and politicking is not as crucial as it used to be.

Most of the time, the conventions are just too long. When a party starts its proceedings on Monday and finishes on Thursday, the networks are virtually held hostage—forced into covering too much that is nonessential. Now, to be fair, there are times when four days are necessary: this year's Democratic convention, for example, promises to be exciting, filled with battles over delegate credentials, party-platform issues and choice of a Vice-Presidential candidate. It's probable that the Democrats will need all four days to sort things out. So flexibility is a necessity: use as much time as is needed, but make sure you make the best use of your time.

In Dallas, things will be calmer. We know who the Republicans will nominate: President Reagan and Vice-President Bush. And we know what the Republican platform will be. The convention could finish its business in two—or perhaps three—days.

It should have been scheduled that way. Television coverage should drive the managers of the conventions to condense things, not expand them or retain the same old format. A shorter convention time, coupled with flexible schedules, would make things easier for the networks and better for the viewers.

I've also never believed that it is necessary to have gavel-to-gavel convention coverage (although I do believe that →

continued

PBS should, as a matter of historical importance, record the entire proceedings). The networks should limit their coverage to significant speeches and important debates in the platform or credentials committees, for example, rather than filling long portions of their broadcast days with interviews of delegates, convention lore and often meaningless political trivia. Instead, they could offer viewers carefully drafted reports about where the candidates stand on the issues, illustrated with eye-catching, computer-generated graphics.

In San Francisco, the differences (and similarities) between Walter Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson could be projected on TV screens side by side. Such illustrations would show, dramatically, their positions on the issues. In Dallas, the networks could show where President Reagan stands, visually counterpointing his programs with his opponent's views on the same subjects. What the viewer would get is less of the "horse-race" political coverage, of which the networks are inordinately fond, and more solid, issue-oriented information useful to voters.

Shorter conventions and limited coverage would also mean less emphasis on the anchor people, which would reduce the cults of personality surrounding them. In 1980, you saw more of Walter Cronkite, David Brinkley, John Chancellor, Frank Reynolds and Ted Koppel than you saw of either Ronald Reagan or Jimmy Carter.

I also think it's time that the officials who run both conventions take careful note of scheduling and adjust their timetables to television. In 1972, for example, the Democratic nominee, Sen. George McGovern, did not get to the podium to make his acceptance speech, surely the centerpiece of any political convention, until after 3 A.M. (ET)—when most viewers had gone to bed. Because both Republicans and Democrats, I think, look upon conventions as free advertising time for their parties, they should schedule the acceptance speeches and other important elements during prime time, when most people are watching.

Perhaps an even more radical suggestion is in order: unless it would interfere with an existing law or regulation (such as antitrust), the networks and the convention managers should agree that coverage would start at a preordained time each night and finish at an agreed-on time—with flexibility built in, of course, for important events that run longer than expected. To me, this would be a responsible way to both handle the substance of the event and increase viewer interest.

Another element we could do with less of is the off-the-cuff interviews with delegates. Instead, the network floor reporters—usually the strongest correspondents journalistically—should deal with issues. Perhaps each one could be assigned an area: foreign policy, the economy, domestic programs and so forth, and become an expert on where the candidates stand. Then floor interviews might become more substantive: a Midwest delegate with a farming background could be asked about agriculture, and so on.

Our national political conventions can be dramatic, as was the Democratic convention of 1968. They can illustrate a shift from the Old Guard to the Young Turks, for example when John F. Kennedy was nominated back in 1960. They can be touching, as when the aged Herbert Hoover spoke at the 1960 Republican convention. And they can be exciting: Sen. Edward Kennedy vs. President Carter in 1980, and my own 1976 battle for delegates with Ronald Reagan. But drama, excitement and all those funny hats aside, political conventions should crystallize for the American electorate the positions that will be taken by each party during the campaign ahead.

To do that, the Republicans, the Democrats—and the networks—must all work to ensure that what we see is "steak," not just "sizzle." Indeed, viewers who ask this year's trendiest political question, "Where's the beef?" should be able to know that it's available on their TV screens from San Francisco and Dallas. (END) the face of Oldenburg, no doubt figuring he was helping a hungry owner.

Happily, the Express improved—at a time the owner and coach may have been eyeing cream pies.

At Denver, the coach, Craig Morton, had only words to hurl. He was quoted as calling his Arizona counterpart George Allen "a liar, a cheat and a thief." Morton later wrote Allen a letter of apology. Allen didn't brim with gratitude.

But, clearly, the new league offers hope, proof of which is that Howard Schnellenberger, coach of national champion University of Miami, has given up his post to assume leadership of the USFL team leaving Washington for Miami next year. Coaching in Washington in '84, Schnellenberger's predecessor was safe. The owner didn't take in enough to buy food to throw.

Chet Simmons, commissioner of the USFL, admits candidly that his league has encountered migraines, but insists, "We still are ahead of where we expected to be at the end of two years."

Soon to accept bids for the 1986 and '87 championship games—'85 already has been awarded to Pontiac, Mich.—Simmons pictures happier days once his television arrangement is straightened out with ABC, whose original two-year contract with the USFL soon expires, and which has exercised an option for another year.

"We must increase our television revenues," says Simmons. (The league recently got a boost when ESPN forked over $70 million to televise USFL games for the next three seasons.) "We also want more games covered than the two a week ABC did this year. And we want relief from the non-blackout clause to which we agreed. Under the present contract, ABC has the right to air locally the home team's game. This has devastated attendance for those home teams."

ABC isn't sure how much it can accommodate the new league with contract changes, but isn't complaining about the deal.

"I can't truthfully say we have been disappointed," says Jim Spence, senior vice-president, ABC Sports. "The ratings the first two years have been roughly up to expectations. We have sold the time effectively. The championship game got an 11.9 rating last year, which was satisfactory, and we are looking for a number that high, or higher, this year at Tampa."

"Word is about that some USFL owners prefer a fall schedule," Spence is told. "How would ABC respond to such an idea once the options expire?"

"We would have to give serious thought to whether we could handle such a change," he answers. "Maybe a more practical suggestion is the one calling for spring games in prime time."

Al Davis submits that a fall schedule would prove catastrophic for the USFL.

"That league would get killed in fall," says Davis. "It not only would be bucking the NFL—at the gate and on television—but also college football, which has become very formidable in many of the areas in which the USFL operates."

"In what respects does the USFL have it tougher than the old AFL did?" Davis is asked.

"In our early years," he replies, "there were 22 teams in pro football. They had squads averaging maybe 35 players per team. Today, there are 46 pro teams, averaging maybe 45 players per team. So there's a clear dilution of talent, making it harder for the USFL to get quality players, in number, out of college. Secondly, the press today is tougher than it was in the '60s. It is less tolerant of defeat and attendance failure. We were laughed at in the AFL, but we weren't attacked as savagely as the USFL teams have been."

Still, Davis admits that USFL owners producing money have skimmed off a measure of talent.

"And they may get more," he says. "Donald Trump [owner of the New Jersey Generals] threatened recently to step up the signing of undergraduates. He said, 'They may play for us in the spring—and for their college in the fall'."

Since Trump has no plans for them in winter and summer, he paves the way for two new leagues. (END)

How Cynthia Sikes Learned to Fight... Hollywood-Style

The St. Elsewhere star wouldn't let herself be pushed around when she first came to town

By Ann Salisbury

From an early age, Cindy Lee Sikes knew she wanted to do something exciting and important when she grew up. So strong was her desire, she says, that going through Wichita Heights High School in Kansas, she guarded against forming deep attachments—afraid they might hold her back from leaving. And within three years of her last season as a pom-pom girl at Kansas football games, Cindy Lee Sikes was in Hollywood.

Once she arrived, she says, "It was like, 'Toto, we're not in Kansas any more'." Her emotional sacrifices, drive and determination paid off. Today she's making her mark in Hollywood as Dr. Annie Cavanero on NBC's St. Elsewhere. And while no one can say she isn't savvy, there were times, when she first arrived, when she wondered whether she shouldn't go back home.

"I was terrified of the big city. I used to drive to acting class, deep into Hollywood, and just be in shock over all the porno places, hookers, street people. It would bring me to tears; it was just the most horrible thing I had ever seen."

As Miss Kansas of 1972, she had been one of 10 semifinalists in the 1972 Miss America contest. Viewing it as "my ticket out of Kansas," she called the advance men for a Bob Hope appearance in the state and talked her way onto the show. That led to a 1972 Christmas tour with Hope to entertain U.S. Army troops in Vietnam and the Far East, and then, following a year at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, the decision to go over the rainbow—to Hollywood.

Today, more than 10 years later, though Cynthia Sikes no longer is naive, she does hold onto a guileless charm that might have had its roots in innocence. She has learned some lessons—such as "how to detect what other people want from you"—but hasn't adopted a full set of Hollywood values, either. Over an introductory lunch she marvels at how she's been able to survive in "the only town that eats its young." Not until later—much later—does she offer details.

Dr. Annie Cavanero is almost entirely dedicated to her work, a serious, no-nonsense professional. But Sikes says she'd like to see Annie smile a little more. "I like to laugh," she says. "But the directors have told me, 'Cynthia, don't smile.' I have these dimples that make it look like I'm smiling, even though I'm not. So I've tried to drop my mouth, totally. And that's not like me at all. They purposely direct me that way, and I think it has a lot to do with their idea of a female being taken seriously. Except that Annie is compassionate. She has heart. So, sometimes I wonder, can't I smile just once?"

Off camera, Sikes says, she is fighting her own battles to be taken seriously as an actress. Battles she says she's been fighting since she first arrived in town. Battles she thinks are universally faced by career women in Hollywood. →

Before arriving for a luncheon interview, for example, Sikes had her publicist call first. At the end of the conversation, the publicist had an important request: "She'd like to make sure you don't ask any questions about her love life."

Weeks later, during another meeting, Sikes explains. Newsweek and the National Enquirer had reported that she'd been sailing, at Hyannis Port, Mass., with Sen. Edward Kennedy. She had wanted to make sure ahead of time that she wasn't being used as a conduit for information about anyone else, Sikes says. "So many reporters were asking me questions that it was as though I was being used to get to him. People were trying to make a friendship into something it wasn't. I'm friends with lots of well known people—though this one has attracted more attention than others."

Sikes attracts attention, too. "There's a flurry of excitement wherever she goes," says Karen Crandall, who has been her friend since their sophomore year in high school. Says a more recent friend, Cyndi Stivers, who writes for Vanity Fair: "She's very good at matching up friends, building the old-girl network. When she comes to New York, I drag her to the event of the evening. We go to a lot of parties together. She knows all the New York regulars I know, now. And in L.A., at Mortons or Mr. Chow, people always come by and pay court to her. She knows evvvverybody!"

At Los Angeles's stylish La Serre restaurant one day, Sikes breezes in on a break from the St. Elsewhere set. A dozen faces light up as she enters the room, and Sikes stops at each table to say hello.

She is naturally and effortlessly pretty. She is graceful and tall, small-boned but athletic—a combination of Irish, English and Cherokee Indian. She radiates intelligence and effervescent energy and always seems ready for fun. She has that gleaming girl-next-door look (her first commercials were for milk), and though she doesn't dress for attention, men find her tantalizingly sexy—and in this restaurant, as elsewhere, tease her mercilessly.

Moving along, going from person to person, she invites them all to come see her in a play she'll be doing at a small theater over the hill. For the part, she says, she must learn karate. Her character has a 60-page monologue. It's a wonderful role. She gets to exhibit a complete range of feeling. She's so excited. She's going to rehearse each evening and work during the days. No time for anything else right now, just lots of work.

In her early days in Hollywood, after several years doing commercials and guest roles in TV series, she began to realize she could benefit from more training. So she took a year to study at San Francisco's American Conservatory Theater, before acting in A.C.T. productions for another year. When she emerged, says A.C.T. general director William Ball, "She had learned how to sustain the inner life of a character." But, Sikes says, although her St. Elsewhere character is a strong, smart authority figure, Dr. Cavanero doesn't "do much that offers a reflection of inner life—so much of the role is consumed with doing medical things and technical things with patients."

She acknowledges, however, that sometimes in her most emotional scenes, she does have difficulty "pulling out just the right feeling." Because "I'm very organized. Sometimes the organized side takes over me and—I can't—it's hard to get into the creative side. I struggle with that a lot. I have to switch off, because I get too organizational . . . it's probably a way of hiding from myself, you know."

Now, on the St. Elsewhere set, a stone-faced Dr. Cavanero is performing an examination for testicular cancer.

Annie: "You've got to take down your pants so I can have a look."

Kevin: "This is kind of embarrassing."

Annie: "I'm a doctor."

Her examination leads to a tongue twister of medical terminology squashed into a sentence—and an operation to remove the tumor. However, there is a happy ending as Dr. Donald Westphall (actor Ed Flanders) informs Annie that Kevin has just discovered he has retained his → virility in spite of the operation. How did he know that?

"He just had an erotic dream about a woman named Annie."

The scriptwriters are at it again: a woman's work is never done. And, in spite of the innuendo, Sikes has emerged untarnished . . . the epitome of the professional young woman doctor.

At home one afternoon, Sikes bounces barefoot around her studio apartment—a large converted carriage/guest house behind an old Beverly Hills mansion. She is wearing a touch of musky perfume, a mid-calf antique-lace petticoat threaded with pink ribbons, and a long pink sweater, bunched up on her arms. She sits up on an overstuffed couch and crosses her feet under her, Indian style.

After anguishing over a decision for days, she has had to back out of her play. It was simply too much. She had lost 6 pounds worrying about it; she had miscalculated on how much time it would take. But anyway, she is still ready to explode with excitement because one of her best friends, an actress she came to Hollywood with 10 years ago, has just been cast in a role on a soap opera. The phone rings. Cynthia takes the call from her friend and blurts out, "I'm just so excited, I can't stand it."

What about our lunch earlier—and those allusions to the tough times? It's a sticky subject, she says. She'll try to avoid the details—but there is a story in it that might help some people. So, it comes rushing out in one roiling, boiling, 10-minute monologue, the essence of which is as follows:

"Early on in my career, one of my bosses would call and say, 'You have to go to this party. It's an official business function. The car will pick you up.' But, once I'd arrive, it would turn out that he would end up escorting me. Now, I'm not stupid, and I know what this is about. It was very painful. I did not know what to do. I did not want to do this. It was humiliating. So, finally, I went to one of my agents. Hysterical. Hysterical. Please help me. Get somebody. Protect me. So my agent said, 'Oh, gee, darling. There's no problem here. What's wrong with you?' They dismissed me totally because they had clients bigger than me working for that man. And the lesson was, I had to go. 'OK. I'm on my own. Nobody's gonna save me.' I'd thought that people valued you as a human being because that's how they are in Kansas, but in this town, people value you for what you mean to them, what they can use you for, how much money you can make them and how important you are to the project. The last thing that matters is what kind of person you are. And I had to do something because I was so demoralized. So. . . " Her eyes narrow into a wicked squint. "I thought, 'Who has some power here?' I called this man's boss. He came to L.A. and we had lunch. He looked at me and said, 'I thought you wanted to go with him.' I said, 'No. I was told to go.' He said, 'Well, this will never happen again. We're moving this person sideways.' And I think I broke into tears. I said I didn't know what to do. I was just so glad. It was like heaven. So, it ended up working out. But all of this made me realize that you are a nonentity. I wasn't taken seriously because I was so young and hadn't done anything important. You are nobody until you prove you are someone to be reckoned with."

Perhaps it was that experience, she says, in retrospect, that helped her realize she should bolster her acting experience with lessons at A.C.T. But, the point was, "I have a lot of pride. I don't want any gifts from anyone. I earn things myself. If I get something, then it's mine. And the last thing I want anyone to say about me is, 'He gave her something,' or 'Oh, another starlet'."

Having put all that behind her, Sikes says, she is happy today. St. Elsewhere has been renewed for another season. She's free for the spring months. To travel. To go to Hawaii, New York, wherever. She is going to buy a house soon. Someplace in a canyon, with trees and privacy. A messenger knocks on her door with an airline ticket. She is leaving town tomorrow. (END)

Keeping in Character

When we last checked in with Knots Landing, Karen MacKenzie (played by Michele Lee, above) was lying in a hotel lobby seriously wounded—having caught an assassin's bullet intended for Gary Ewing. This, of course, is your basic end-of-the-season-prime-time-soap-opera-cliffhanger in action. But you can bet that Karen will be back. Knots Landing creator David Jacobs says that he's already learned his lesson about killing off key characters. "When Don Murray [who played Sid Fairgate] wanted to leave," recalls Jacobs, "we had him die after a car accident. We should have replaced him immediately. It almost cost us the show. Men stopped watching and the ratings dropped." Jacobs won't make the same mistake with Karen. In fact, he says, "She won't even be in the hospital for long. She will return. She might even be better off."

Close to the Heart

For Mariette Hartley (below, right), playing the mother of a teen-ager who commits suicide—her role in CBS's upcoming TV-movie "Silence of the Heart"—was an emotional experience. "When I was 15," Hartley reveals, "I found myself toying with suicide." Hartley resolved her problems, but some years later her father took his own life. "The pain and remorse my family felt are still with me," says the actress. "My own life and career just fell apart. Suicide and suicidal thoughts are in almost every family," Hartley continues, "but people never talk about them. Maybe 'Silence of the Heart' will break that silence."

Harry Anderson (right) still can't get over the similarities between Harry Anderson, the comedian and magician, and Judge Harry Stone, the daffy jurist he plays on NBC's Night Court. "When I read the script, I wondered why somebody had developed a TV show for me," says Anderson. "There's even a line in the show about [Judge Stone] having 'FUN' tattooed on his arm." What's so unusual about that? "I really have 'FUN' tattooed on my arm," claims Anderson. Was the show indeed written with him in mind? Hardly. "It turns out the producer had never even heard of me!" Anderson reports that his television exposure has even helped his magic act: "People give me more leeway now. They already know I'm funny."

← Impressive Performance

Ageless screen siren Betty Boop will make it to TV this fall in an animated special for CBS. However, Desiree Goyette, who wrote the songs for the show, says that she was just minding her own business when producers tapped her to provide Betty's voice. "I was playing the piano for the girls doing the audition," Goyette (left) recalls. "A lot of them didn't know what Betty sounded like. So I did an impression." It was enough of an impression to land her the part. So what's the secret to doing Betty Boop? "You kind of pucker up."

Silver Anniversary ↗

In 1960, Glen Campbell (above, right) left Albuquerque, N.M., and headed for Los Angeles. "All I wanted to become was just a good studio guitar player," he says. "But I guess I really hit it beyond my wildest dreams." On July 16, HBO celebrates the musician's 25 years in show business with an hour-long songfest featuring such friends of Glen's as Kris Kristofferson, Willie Nelson and Johnny Cash. The show will also include clips from The Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour that ran on CBS from 1969 to 1972. "I still look at a lot of those shows," says Campbell—who also admits he still occasionally watches his performance in the 1969 movie "True Grit." "I was so bad in 'True Grit' that I made John Wayne look good enough to win an Oscar."

DRAW!

Kirk Douglas and James Coburn (below, l.-r.) star in this made-for-cable Western. Douglas is only sorry that they didn't have more scenes together. "There is," he says, "such an interesting relationship between these two old-timers, the great sheriff [Coburn], who's now a drunkard, and the character I play, the egotistical gunman, Handsome Harry Holland." Harry isn't really a blackguard, but he is the kind of character Douglas says he relishes playing: "I don't think virtue is photogenic." ("Draw!" which contains strong language and brief nudity, begins July 15 on HBO.)

Human Touch

In "Shattered Vows," an upcoming NBC TV-movie, David Morse (St. Elsewhere's Dr. Jack Morrison) plays a healer of souls, rather than a healer of bodies. "I'm playing a priest who believes he should be out working in the community," says Morse (above). "That's something Jack Morrison as a doctor feels too." Morse quickly adds that his characters are both "very human. They have faults like everybody else. One of the unfortunate things we do to priests and doctors is put them in godlike positions and not allow for the human parts of them."

Love Stories

Ah, love. It's a many-splendored thing. It's never having to say you're sorry. And it's in the air, always.

Can you recognize the following television couples who, at any given moment, are in various stages of love? Then see if you can name the actors who play them and the shows they appear in.

1. She's a high-strung intellectual who means well and he's her hunky employer. The only thing they seem to have in common is their attraction for each other.
2. He's a charmer with a mysterious past and she's a spunky go-getter. Together, they're television's answer to Gable and Lombard.
3. He's earnest and sincere and tough when he has to be and she's a dedicated career woman. After battling big-city life all day, they like to slip into a hot bubble bath . . . together, of course.
4. She was a poor girl who turned rich when she married him. They're constantly beset by problems—his ex-wife, her assistant, his children—but they always seem to make it through.

TV Laddergrams

A laddergram is a form of wordplay in which the object is to "travel" from one word to another by a series of letter substitutions. Only one letter may be changed at each step, and a real word must be formed at each stage. Proper names are not allowed. An example:

To go from HEAD to FOOT in five steps you might use the words HEAD, HELD, HOLD, FOLD, FOOD and FOOT.

Of the three laddergrams below that use titles of popular shows, LOVE to BOAT is for beginners, STAR to TREK is medium-hard and DREAM to HOUSE is for experts only.

The number of steps between words represents the least number of words we had to use per laddergram. See if you can match or better that number.

The Melody Lingers On

We've taken some lyrics from 10 television theme songs. Can you identify the shows they're singing about?

1. Come and knock on our door . . .
2. Sometimes you've got to go where everybody knows your name . . .
3. Just two good ol' boys . . .
4. Well, it's you, girl . . .
5. Just when you think you're all by yourself, you're not . . .
6. Well, we're movin' on up . . .
7. Gee, our old La Salle ran great . . .
8. There's a new girl in town . . .
9. It was you, then came you . . .
10. I bet we've been together . . .

Radical Departure

Daytime dramas change casts almost as often as the folks on Dynasty change costumes. And some of those changes can be quite notable. Case in point: the impending departure of Lisa from As the World Turns. Eileen Fulton (below), who created the character, left the series in a huff in the spring of 1983 over contract differences, and was replaced by Betsy von Furstenberg. Now it's Von Furstenberg's turn. Lisa's already been packed off to Europe on a very extended shopping trip—so extended, report insiders, that there are no plans to bring her back.

Guess the Plot Line

Although details of NBC's Santa Barbara are still under wraps, its co-creator Bridget Dobson did drop this hint about the new sudser's central issue: "The plot involves a social and personal contemporary issue that is not a disease and has not been part of a soap plot before." While you ponder that one, it should be noted that Santa Barbara will include a daytime first: one of its core families will be Mexican-American and, according to Dobson, "strong, solid and tightknit."

Fan-tasia →

Sometimes a fan's dreams of daytime can come true. They have for New York hair stylist Jim Nelson, an avid viewer of All My Children for more than 12 years. Last winter, Nelson had a friend get him in to see a rehearsal of the show. By day's end, he had been hired as the soap's new hairdresser. "I couldn't believe it," he says. "I had just wanted to meet Susan Lucci." Ah, but there's more. Nelson (below) is also something of a songwriter. And backstage one day recently, he was playing a tape of one of his compositions. The show's musical director heard it, liked it—and picked the song as the love ballad for Tad and Hillary. "This whole thing has been a dream come true," says Nelson. "It is possible for a fan to get in there. I feel like one of the family. It's not even like going to work."

Digger Phelps: Telling It Like It Is

Notre Dame's outspoken head basketball coach, Digger Phelps (right), has signed on to do commentary for ABC's Summer Olympics coverage. That doesn't mean he's going to start mincing his words. "There will not be any true [Summer] Olympic competition until 1992," he declares. According to Phelps, if the USSR thinks that Los Angeles isn't safe enough for its athletes, then the Soviets will surely find fault with the site of the '88 Games, South Korea—a nation they don't even recognize and one whose citizens aren't likely to soon forget how the Soviets shot down one of their commercial airliners. On the bright side, Phelps says that the Eastern Bloc pullout really won't have much effect on this year's Olympic basketball. "We know [the Soviets] have a very talented team," he says. "But let's not forget the 1980 finish in Moscow: Yugoslavia-Italy-Russia." Phelps expects the Yugoslavs and Italians, along with the Spanish and West Germans, to contend with the U.S. in L.A. As for his broadcasting career, Phelps says it will be at least eight years before he considers going behind the mike full time. "I think I can win a national championship in that period of time," he says. "But after that, broadcasting is something I definitely want to do."

News Update

Iron Curtain Viewers May See "Sakharov"

HBO's made-for-cable movie about dissident Soviet physicist Andrei Sakharov will soon be seen behind the Iron Curtain. While foreign rights to "Sakharov" have not been sold to Soviet-bloc nations, the film will probably air later this month in many European countries, including those along the East-West border. "There's no way they can prevent the signal from going into the East," says producer Robert Berger. Austria and West Germany have bought rights to the film and the movie will be visible on TV sets in portions of East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Hungary when it's telecast in those countries.

The Soviets are so sensitive about the Sakharov case that Finnish authorities refused to allow the producers to film the Moscow sequences in Helsinki. "They told us they didn't want to offend their Russian neighbors," says Berger.

HBO will show the film again in September. Its rating when it was shown in June was only 9.6, but Berger thinks "Sakharov" will do much better in Europe. "He is an incredibly well-known figure there," says Berger. "Much more so than in this country."

Networks May Carry Fewer College Games

Some network executives are predicting that lower fees, oversaturation and fewer games on the networks will result from the recent Supreme Court decision on college football. "We see a potential avalanche of games on regional and cable outlets," says Don Bernstein of ABC. "So, in all probability, there will be a cutback on the networks." The ruling freed ABC and CBS from contracts for next season that would have cost them about $265 million. Some advertising executives are saying that the networks will be the big winners if they can buy games in exclusive time slots at reduced rates.

Bernstein says ABC's football schedule is "suspended in midair" while various college groups try to develop workable plans. "We're hoping someone will come up with something viable," he adds. —J.M.

TV Season to Start on Time

The fall TV season will start on schedule, as a result of the new contract between the Directors Guild of America and the movie and TV producers. Although negotiations continued beyond the deadline, an agreement was reached in time to avert a strike.

Hotel Bill

Normally, when you check into a hotel, you pay them. When Elizabeth Taylor checked into ABC's Hotel for an upcoming guest appearance, they paid her. And how. The two-time Oscar winner reportedly received $100,000 for her week's work and got to keep the 11-piece wardrobe designer Nolan Miller fashioned for her. In addition, more than $1 million in jewelry was borrowed for her to wear that week. But even that wasn't enough for Taylor, who supplemented the borrowed jewels with several million dollars' worth of her own rocks. Says one insider: "She likes to look good."

Hill Street's Folly

Even though Hill Street Blues walked off with six Emmys last year, the ratings were down and the critics were often surly. Bruce Weitz, who plays the often surly Det. Mick Belker, has an idea why. "I think last year we lost sight of the original concept of the show," he says. "We got a little soap operaish last year, but I think [the producers] are planning on getting back to the serious business of making people laugh."

Touchy Subject

The longtime love affair between newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst and actress Marion Davies will be the subject of an ABC TV-movie next season. "It's a remarkable love story," says a source close to the production. The Hearst family, however, doesn't seem to agree. They have rebuffed ABC's efforts to get help in obtaining permission to film some of the picture at San Simeon, the publisher's lavish California estate. "Hearst's sons were raised by his wife all the time the affair was going on," notes the insider. "Apparently they're still sensitive about the story 30 years after it ended."

Generally Speaking

Gen. John J. Pershing's 1916 foray into Mexico in pursuit of Pancho Villa is the subject of "Clash of Eagles," a TV-movie that's being developed for consideration by NBC. Bruce Boxleitner was approached to play Pershing's young subordinate—George S. Patton—but he was unavailable. Among the stars producers say they "would love to have" as Pershing are George C. Scott (the screen's most memorable Patton) and Gregory Peck, who—of course—previously played a general named MacArthur. At ease, readers.

Senior Class

Aaron Spelling is one producer who seems to be enamored of veteran actors. On Spelling's new ABC series, Glitter, Helen Hayes will play a reclusive movie star who consents to a Glitter magazine interview; Burgess Meredith has been cast as a psychic trying to sell the mag his predictions; and Harriet Nelson (in what may be a recurring role) will guest-star opposite her granddaughter, series regular Tracy Nelson, as a reporter whom the young Glitterati hope to keep from retiring.

RIVERA'S CRUSADE

The problem with so-called "crusading reporters," as advocated by Geraldo Rivera ["We Need More Crusading Journalists," June 23], is that the vast majority of "investigative reporters" completely fails to separate fact from editorial opinion. Fred Friendly and Geraldo believe that I as a viewer need "help to make up [my] own mind." This attitude is an insult to every member of the news-watching public. I can make up my own mind, Geraldo. You do your job and just report the facts. I can editorialize on my own.

Jerry K. Belew
Richmond, Va.

Hooray for Geraldo! He covered all the bases in his usual professional manner. It behooves all media to separate fact from opinion and commentary, but the current success of in-depth investigative programs suggests there is room for more such work, especially if the investigators focus on finding solutions to the problems and forget about ego-tripping races for the ratings.

Charray Bryant
Editor, Animal Review
Pocasset, Mass.

After reading the self-congratulatory article by Geraldo Rivera, I have come to the conclusion that either the world is in worse shape than I had imagined or Mr. Rivera is quite ineffectual. If it takes 12 years to correct a mistake as flagrant as that which was foisted upon Bernard Carabello [at New York's Willowbrook Institution], then the self-appointed media wizards had better change their tactics.

"BATTLE OF WITS AND STRENGTH AT CONVENTION," blared the network press release.

Sounded promising. The Democratic jamboree in San Francisco was obviously going to be enlivened by some high-energy jousting among the Presidential candidates.

Not quite. NBC was publicizing not the Democratic Convention, but the June 30 episode of The Rousters, which was set in a bounty hunters' convention in Las Vegas.

The other convention—the one that claims a good chunk of the current week's prime-time schedule—will have its own moments of suspense and excitement, but the problem, as always, will be knowing when to tune in. To separate the wheat from the chat, you may want to refer to the Democratic Convention Guide indicating when the big speeches and the significant pitched battles are expected. It can be found just ahead of this week's program listings. Of course, if you're intent on seeing everything, a few PBS stations will have gavel-to-gavel coverage, which will also be available to cable homes on C-SPAN and CNN.

CBS and NBC are breaking with tradition by not going gavel-to-gavel. Public interest has slackened, explains Raymond Lockhart, vice-president for political programming at NBC. "Viewers have certainly turned away from us [in previous convention years] and switched to the local movies."

In this ultra-political week, the leavening is provided by sports: the USFL Championship; and one of the top Women's Golf events, the U.S. Open.

You hate sports and you couldn't care less about elections? Then try Stephane Grappelli in New Orleans, an hour-long set by the inimitable 76-year-old jazz violinist.

ON CABLE

In addition to the cable coverage of the Democratic Convention on C-SPAN and CNN, there's early-round coverage of the British Open (golf) from St. Andrews on ESPN, which also carries the final two days of the Davis Cup Tennis quarterfinals. Meanwhile, on HBO, Boxing enigma Gerry Cooney meets the little known Phillip Brown.

Faerie Tale Theatre gives its full production treatment to "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Elizabeth McGovern, Vanessa Redgrave and Vincent Price are head and shoulders above everyone else.

In some areas broadcast programs may not be seen on the days indicated. For times and channels of cable shows, see program listings.

THIS WEEK'S MOVIES

BY JUDITH CRIST

BROADCAST:

Sat., CBS	Hide In Plain Sight
Sun., NBC	Forbidden Paradise
Wed., PBS	Little People
Fri., NBC	The Haunting Passion

ON CABLE:

HBO	Draw!

There's little quantity and less quality in this skimpy network-movie week.

From the bottom of the barrel comes Dino De Laurentiis's 1979 "Hurricane," retitled Forbidden Paradise. A testament to wasted talents and money, it's a revised remake of John Ford's 1937 classic of high passions and higher winds in the South Seas, with Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall. This version, set in the '20s, has an interracial romance between Mia Farrow and a nonactor named Dayton Ka'ne, a local chief who looks like a cross between John Travolta and Arnold Schwarzenegger. It doesn't sizzle. Luckily, 29 of the movie's 125 minutes have been cut.

The week's second theatrical premiere is of Little People, a 1982 documentary about dwarfs, by Jan Krawitz and Thomas Ott, that explores the lives of these men and women and their problems in an out-of-scale world. Unidentified on screen, a number of remarkably articulate "little people," as they call themselves, discuss their backgrounds and their social, medical and domestic situations. Surprisingly for PBS, some 31 of the film's 88 minutes have been cut.

The week's TV-movie repeat is of 1983's The Haunting Passion, a tedious made-for-TV ghost story that boasts a really dumb ghost that haunts neglected wife Jane Seymour.

The theatrical repeat is of 1980's Hide In Plain Sight, in which James Caan makes his directorial debut. But it is as star that he triumphs in this real-life story of a Buffalo factory worker whose children suddenly vanished in the custody of his divorced wife. The woman was remarried, to a hoodlum involved in the Federal witness-protection program that provided the family with a new identity and location. As the blue-collar father fighting a tangle of red tape to find his children, Caan gives a performance that is ultimately overwhelming in its power despite the flawed script and direction.

ON CABLE

The one contemporary newcomer this cable week is Draw!, an HBO Premiere Films offering that once again is high in star value, low in script quality. Directed by Steven H. Stern from an original screenplay by Stanley Mann, it does give us Kirk Douglas and James Coburn—and how good it is to see Douglas back in any situation! In this one, he's an overage outlaw, the legendary Handsome Harry Holland, fresh from prison and on his way to retirement in Mexico, who makes the mistake of pausing in Bell City to win a poker hand. The town's nastiest citizen is the loser and in no time at all there's a bit of a shoot-out and Harry's holed up in the local hotel with an actress as his hostage. Only one man can cope: the legendary overage lawman, Sam Starret (Coburn). What ensues is pleasant enough, but it's a pity that given HBO's resources and this cast, contrivance and cliché haunt the script.

In some areas broadcast movies may not be seen on the days indicated. For times of cable movies, see program listings and Pay-TV Movie Guide.

Democratic Convention Guide

"Th' dimmycratic party ain't on speakin' terms with itsilf."—satirist Finley Peter Dunne (1867-1936)

Following a typically acrimonious primary season, Democrats like Massachusetts senator Edward M. Kennedy have urged party members to "stop belaboring our differences." And, though the party isn't widely known for conducting its affairs in a tidy fashion, this year's cries for unity have been heeded—in some quarters. For instance, former Vice President Walter Mondale is expected to win an easy first-ballot nomination in San Francisco on Wednesday because his chief rival, Sen. Gary Hart, has withdrawn his threat to mount a credentials challenge to several hundred Mondale delegates.

However, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the third candidate, has raised questions about the platform and party rules, and may prove to be a wild card. So might some women activists; at press time, they were demanding that the Party nominate a woman Vice Presidential candidate—a demand that could carry on to the convention floor on Thursday if Mr. Mondale opts for a man.

Here's a quick rundown of the party's scheduled agenda . . .

MONDAY: Opening ceremonies; tributes; rules and credentials reports; keynote address (by New York governor Mario Cuomo).
TUESDAY: Platform-committee reports.
WEDNESDAY: Presidential-nominating speeches; Presidential roll call.
THURSDAY: Vice Presidential nomination; Presidential and Vice Presidential acceptance speeches.

Scheduled Coverage

This year—for the first time since the 1950s—no commercial broadcast network has plans for live, gavel-to-gavel convention coverage (though the networks do plan to cover newsworthy events live). So insiders are saying that the Democrats will do what they can to ensure that anything they really want the Nation to watch will occur during prime time.

ABC, CBS and NBC have announced tentative—and varying—start times for their coverage of the convention. Sessions are scheduled to end at 8 P.M. each evening, and are to be followed by regular network programming (or, in some cases, local programming). In addition, ABC's "Good Morning America," NBC's "Today" and "The CBS Morning News" will originate from San Francisco this week; and Dan Rather will anchor a 30-minute preview of the convention (a "CBS News Special"), scheduled for Sunday at 10:30 P.M.

Gavel-to-gavel coverage is available, however, on some PBS stations, picking up transmissions provided by the cable network C-SPAN. (Other PBS stations will carry just part of C-SPAN's coverage.)

For scheduled broadcast start times in your area, see each evening's Close-up.

On Cable

C-SPAN and CNN have scheduled gavel-to-gavel coverage, though CNN plans to break away for newscasts (lasting about 10 minutes) on the hour. Also, both networks will carry convention-related programming from San Francisco beginning on Saturday.

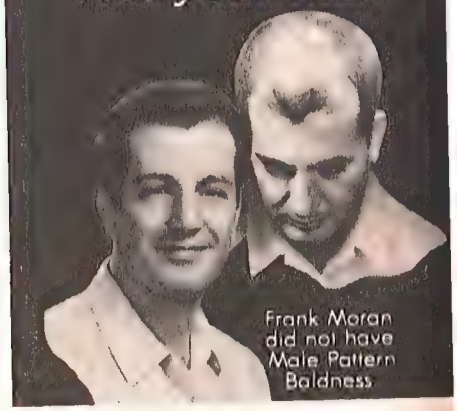
Lose your scalp problems. Not your hair.



Many conditions can cause hair loss. No matter which one is causing your hair loss, if you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead you are beyond help.
So, if you still have hair on top of your head, and would like to stop hair loss and improve your hair . . . now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.
Male pattern baldness is the cause of a great majority of cases of baldness and excessive hair loss, for which no method is effective. The EHS Program cannot help those who are slick bald after years of gradual hair loss.
But if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness seems to "run in the family," this is certainly no proof of the causes of your hair loss.
DON'T SUFFER UNNECESSARY BALDNESS!

1 PM 4 WOMEN'S GOLF
Final-round play in the U.S. Women's Open at the 6285-yard, par-72 Salem Country Club in Peabody, Mass. Last year, Jan Stephenson crowned her finest season with a one-stroke Open victory over the LPGA Tour's top two '83 money-winners, JoAnne Carner and Patty Sheehan. If Stephenson is going to repeat, she'll have to tame a bewitching Salem layout that features lots of woods and bunkers, and fairways that dip and roll. (Live)
5 SPORTSWORLD
Boxing and diving dominate today's program. The fight is a scheduled 10-round lightweight bout between Juan Arroyo (22-1-1, 11 KOs) and Adolfo

Medel (20-1, 14 KOs), taped in Miami. (Records by The Ring magazine.) The diving is the McDonald's Invitational Diving Championship, taped at the Olympic Swim Stadium in Los Angeles. Also: the Men's World Cup Pro Surfing Championships, taped off Oahu, Hawaii. (2 hrs.)
[Time approximate after golf.]
7 SPORTS SUNDAY
A WBC super-lightweight title fight tops today's card. Also: continued coverage (taped) of the Tour de France cross-country bicycle race. In the fight, Billy Costello (27-0, 17 KOs) makes his first title defense against top contender Ronnie Shields (20-2, 15 KOs) in a scheduled 12-rounder telecast live from Costello's home town of Kingston, N.Y. (Records by The Ring magazine.) Costello won the title when he knocked out Bruce Curry last January. (2 hrs.)

DRAW!

With their guns at their hips—and their tongues in their cheeks—Kirk Douglas and James Coburn square off in this 1984 made-for-cable movie about old foes in the Old West.

Douglas plays Handsome Harry Holland, a legendary outlaw holed up in a hotel—with a woman hostage (Alexandra Bastedo)—after shooting the town's sheriff in self-defense. "There ain't but one man can stand up to Holland," says the deputy sheriff (Graham Jarvis), and that's Sam Starret (Coburn). He's "the greatest lawman that ever drew a breath." Trouble is, Starret's breath always reeks of alcohol.

Holland wants a horse and safe passage out of town; the town wants Holland to hang; and what Starret wants most is another drink. These (and other, minor subplots) all point to a climactic showdown in which the aging and proud cowboys settle the issue—alone—on an empty street.

Steven H. Stern directed from a script by Stanley Mann. Not rated, the film contains strong language, violence and sexual situations. Reggie Bell: Derek McGrath. Moses: Jason Michas. Ephraim: Len Birman. (1 hr., 40 min.)

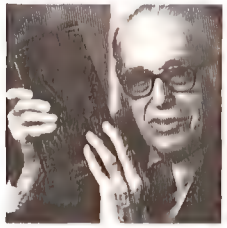
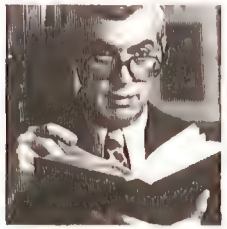
NEW COLLECTOR'S LIBRARY CONFOUNDS EXPERTS.

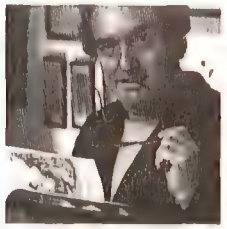
We asked these three experts to put a price on this edition of Dickens' DAVID COPPERFIELD.



"The raised spine is a giveaway. That's quality binding. $30."
KEN McCORMICK, Sr. Consulting Editor, Doubleday.



"The paper is fine mill. The end pages an unusual design. A first-class job. $35."
PHILIP LYMAN, Gotham Book Mart.



"The illustrations are superb. Excellent typography. $35."
CLIVE BARNES, Cultural critic, New York Post.

WRONG. WRONG. WRONG.

The fact is that this edition of DAVID COPPERFIELD is only $12.50.
How can these experts in publishing be so right in their praise and so wrong on the price?
For the answer, turn the page.

$12.50. How did we do it?

The Collector's Library of the world's great books. A revolution in publishing.

With this remarkable edition, Franklin Library, the world's leading publisher of fine books, proudly confounds the experts.

Let's take a close look and see why.

Each of the fifty volumes is individually designed; each cover is a work of art, each binding distinct in size, grain, color.

(The effect in your room is uncanny. Each volume different but harmonious. A luxurious library that is a tribute to your taste.)

The hubbed spines, the original endpapers, the specially milled book paper—all signify quality.

Many artists were commissioned for the project. And the illustrations are magnificent. (The color paintings by Thomas Rowlandson in TOM JONES make us tingle with pleasure.)

The typography is classic, the printing first rate, the contents immortal and priceless.

Yet the price for each volume is only $12.50, less, as you know, than ordinary hardcover books.

It is a publishing conundrum with a simple, albeit spectacular answer. Franklin Library has made a publishing breakthrough of which it is very proud.

Here is the genius of mankind

Eternal classics, from Homer's ODYSSEY to Melville's MOBY DICK.

The chilling tales of Edgar Allan Poe. The romance of Emily Bronte's WUTHERING HEIGHTS. The earthy humor of CANTERBURY TALES by Chaucer. The transcendent dramas of Shakespeare (illustrated by Henry Fuseli) Ibsen, Chekhov, Great English and American poetry.

Fifty volumes in all. A library of genius that belongs in every home.

Here is adventure for the mind, for yourself and for your children. Inspiration and pleasure more abiding than television, more memorable than movies. At a price that makes it almost mandatory. (And that is Franklin Library's intention.)

Subscribe without risk

As a subscriber, you build your collection one book each month, and payment is on the same convenient basis. The subscription price is a remarkable $12.50 per volume.

A guaranteed price, if your subscription is mailed by August 15, 1984. You need send no payment now.

You may cancel your subscription at any time, upon 30 days' written notice, and return any book for any reason, within 30 days.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION
3 PM (CNN)
6 PM (4) (5) (7)

The 39th Democratic Convention gets underway at San Francisco's Moscone Center.

The delegates have a busy opening-day agenda planned for them, beginning with reports from the credentials and rules committees. The Democrats have been seeking to resolve their differences since shortly after the primaries ended, and have managed to engineer compromises that they hope will ensure a battle-free floor tonight. That would put the pomp and ceremony scheduled to follow in prime time—when the broadcast networks are slated to provide live coverage.

Among the events scheduled for this evening are welcoming remarks by San Francisco mayor Dianne Feinstein; tributes to prominent Democrats; and the keynote address, to be delivered by New York governor Mario Cuomo.

While ABC, CBS and NBC will join the proceedings in progress, CNN and C-SPAN are planning gavel-to-gavel coverage. Also, some PBS stations are picking up all or part of C-SPAN's coverage.

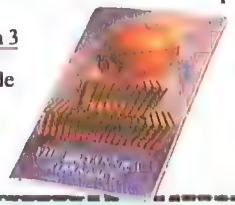
It's no secret that your children's success in life depends largely on the grades they get in school.

That's why you should give your child as many tools for success as you can. Especially a fine encyclopaedia.

The New Encyclopaedia Britannica is, quite simply, the world's most valuable home library. It contains 30 volumes...33,000 pages ...43,000,000 (that's 43 million) words ...24,000 illustrations (more than 8,000 in full color). Britannica 3 offers you more encyclopaedia—and more value per dollar—than any other comparable reference work.

Yet, amazingly enough, Britannica 3 is not out of your reach. The complete 30-volume set is now available direct from the publisher on the affordable Book a Month Payment Plan.



Would you like more information about Britannica 3—including a FREE preview—without obligation?

Then take the first step: mail the card below. We will send you a free booklet and also provide you with complete information on how you can give your family The Britannica Advantage.

Mail this card for your FREE 3-Volume DESK REFERENCE SET

ABSOLUTELY FREE AND WITHOUT OBLIGATION, please send me your full-color booklet, "The Britannica Advantage," which pictures and describes The New Encyclopaedia Britannica. I would also like, without obligation, complete details from your publisher's local representative as to how I may obtain Britannica 3 on extremely convenient terms and at the same time receive my 3-volume Desk Reference Set as a FREE PREVIEW GIFT. Answering this ad does not obligate me in any way to purchase Britannica 3. It does entitle me to a FREE Preview and a FREE Desk Reference Set.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION
3 PM (CNN)
6 PM 4 5 7

The Democrats tackle their second day's agenda, which should be devoted mainly to debate on the party platform.

The Mondale forces hope they can use the platform to unify the party. "This is a way to get the whole Democratic tribe back into one tent," says Mondale aide Paul Tully. Facing the delegates at San Francisco's Moscone Center is a document of some 35,000 to 40,000 words that outlines the party's positions for the fall campaign.

Unlike those adopted for recent campaigns, this proposed platform includes fewer commitments to large-scale social programs. Debate is slated for five minority reports; one of them—drafted by supporters of the Rev. Jesse Jackson—would put the party on record as opposing runoff primaries. In addition, backers of Colorado senator Gary Hart may also present a minority plank that attempts to set guidelines for the use of U.S. military force abroad.

PICKING THE NOMINEE

The Democrats select their 1984 Presidential candidate.

And as matters stood at press time, there was little doubt that the candidate would be Walter Mondale. The "magic number" of delegates needed for nomination is 1967—a number the former Vice President claimed to have surpassed the day after the final round of primaries last month. Both Colorado senator Gary Hart (with an estimated 1249 delegates) and the Rev. Jesse Jackson (who has approximately 350) have indicated that they'll continue their campaigns on to the convention floor, but it's highly unlikely that either man will pose a serious threat to Mr. Mondale's chances of becoming the party's standard-bearer.

Presidential nominating and seconding speeches are scheduled to open this evening's order of business, followed by the alphabetical roll call of the states and territories.

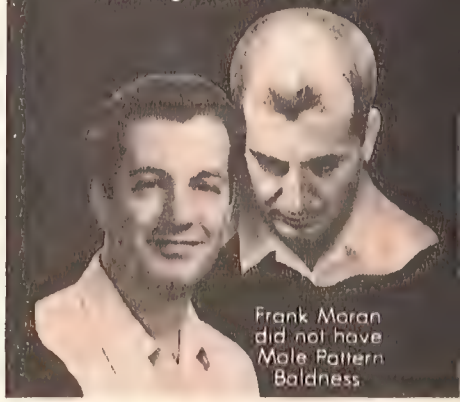
Lose your scalp problems. Not your hair.



Many conditions can cause hair loss. No matter which one is causing your hair loss, if you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead you are beyond help.

So, if you still have hair on top of your head, and would like to stop hair loss and improve your hair . . . now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Male pattern baldness is the cause of a great majority of cases of baldness and excessive hair loss, for which no method is effective. The EHS Program cannot help those who are slick bald after years of gradual hair loss.

But if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness seems to "run in the family," this is certainly no proof of the causes of your hair loss.

DON'T SUFFER UNNECESSARY BALDNESS!

WRAPPING IT UP

The Democrats close their 39th National Convention by choosing a Vice Presidential candidate, and sending the ticket off to do battle with the Republicans in the fall.

The nominating and balloting for the second spot on Presidential tickets has traditionally been something of an afterthought: the convention delegates have simply "endorsed" the candidate the nominee for the top spot has selected. This year, however, speculation over the man—or woman—likely standard-bearer Walter Mondale would pick as his running mate has been front-page news. This evening in San Francisco the delegates have their say.

In addition to the Vice Presidential nomination, tonight's agenda calls for acceptance speeches by the Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION
At press time, there was a possibility that continued coverage of the Democratic Convention would delay or pre-empt scheduled programming on ABC, CBS and NBC affiliates.

VITAL STATISTICS

In the 1982-83 school year, an estimated 18.5 million elementary- and secondary-school students received some classroom instruction via television. Science, social science, language arts and reading were the subjects that made most use of the medium, according to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

"If something doesn't change, you're going to need bypass surgery."

The words you fear. Silently suffering from heart disease, you try to cope with the side effects of medication. You live in fear of heart attack, or worse, bypass surgery.

Fortunately, there is an alternative.

Our private health care center operates a Heart Rehabilitation Program that can help put you on the road to good health again — free from excessive medications, free from fear of bypass surgery and heart attack. Our staff of physicians and health care professionals can provide you with a personalized program of diet, exercise, and a stress management program that treats your heart disease — not just your symptoms.

Call us today for information on our one-, two-, and three-week programs. It just may be an alternative you can live with.

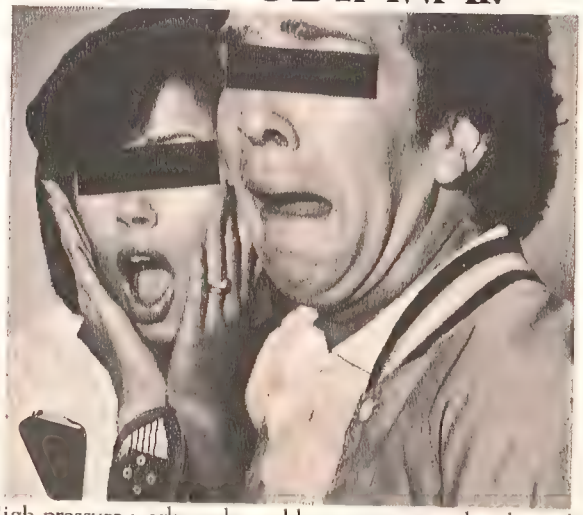
PORT LUDLOW'S $99, MIDWEEK-SNEAK, GOLF GETAWAY.



High pressure work-weeks and low pressure weekend weather can drive even the meek to desperate deeds. The Resort at Port Ludlow's Summer Midweek Special is well worth the risk.

Should your boss fail to appreciate the therapeutic value of two days of golf and aquatics it's time to take matters into your own hands. The deception begins.

Upon your covert arrival you'll receive four coupons, good for golf, golf cart rental, even power or sailboat rental.

After a fine day on the championship course, secretly improving your lies, you can retire to the new Nibblick's 19th, scorecard in hand, to continue your lies.

You'll want plenty of sunscreen poolside to preserve your palor for the office spys.

And should the boss coincidentally check in while you're checking out, all is not lost. Any person with a low handicap and a high regard for the finer things in life will surely see the humor of it all. Honest.

Call The Resort at Port Ludlow at 1-800-732-1239 or your travel agent for details and reservations today.

SUMMER MIDWEEK SPECIAL

$99 Per person based on double occupancy.

Includes two nights deluxe lodging and four coupons. Coupons are redeemable for your choice; golf, golf cart rental, powerboat or sailboat rental. Available June through September 1984, Sunday through Thursday. Excluding 4th of July and Labor Day weekends. Three-day and five-day packages also available.

attempted kicks shows what a ludicrous hybrid PKA karate really is ["Something's Afoot on Cable," June 16]. No one ever had to require specific techniques in traditional karate contests, nor was [boxer] Jack Dempsey required by the rules to throw the left hook that broke Jess Willard's jaw. Imagine how ridiculous pro football would be if competitors were required to attempt so many passes per quarter. No doubt many PKA champions are pretty good at karate, so why do they parade around in an absurd parody of ringfighting that is neither good boxing nor good karate—and that is not even good showmanship?

SOUND IDEA

With the advent of television stereo broadcasts ["It's Months Away: Hear Ye! Hear Ye! Stereo Comes to TV," June 9], it is time for a new industry standard. This standard would require broadcasters to pipe the "canned laughter" over the left speaker channel and the program over the right speaker channel. This would allow viewers who are annoyed or insulted by canned laughter to turn off the left speaker and enjoy the program. Short predictable bursts of laughter in places with no humor are extremely irritating. Movies do quite well without canned laughter—what's wrong with television?

Jeers to TV GUIDE for denouncing the National Coalition on Television Violence ["Cheers 'N' Jeers," June 9]. From a parent's point of view, I agree with them that Donald Duck is too violent. I would have appreciated knowing [the NCTV's] opinion before I let my children watch [Donald Duck cartoons].

THE CARSON APPEAL

Why He's Lasted So Long

A searching look at TV's most successful talk-show host

By Bel Kaufman

If no one had ever learned to read, said a French cynic whose name escapes me, no one would ever fall in love. At least, not the romantic love literature taught us to expect. If no one had ever invented television, no one would ever know Johnny Carson. At least, not as the most successful and long-lived talk-show host. Where else could he have achieved such prominence, such power? Television is his natural habitat; it is only this special medium that has nurtured his special talents.

And they are remarkable, in spite of the tendency to shrug them off as lightweight, especially in intellectual circles. Some of my friends would never admit that they watch him; others confess they cannot go to sleep without Johnny.

Curt Gunther

Bel Kaufman is the author of "Love, Etc." and "Up the Down Staircase."

Philippe Halsman

The fact that he has survived as host of The Tonight Show for more than 21 years makes him a talk-show phenomenon, and talk shows are phenomena of TV, and TV is a phenomenon of modern life.

I have never met him, nor do I know anyone who has. I come to this article unprejudiced by knowledge of the man outside the little screen. I am merely one-eighteen-millionth of his audience. (He is supposed to have that many viewers, and an annual income of as many dollars as people who watch him.) I write only of his image on the screen: this image is the man.

What makes Johnny run so long? Why has he remained on top of this fiercely competitive field? Is it because he does what no one else does better? But what exactly does he do? He calls himself a performer, an entertainer—but is he? Is he an artist of small talk? A catalyst? A "personality"?

I believe he reflects the great American majority, its values, its myths. He is the American Dream personified: the typical middle-aged boy next door, who has come out of Nebraska (he frequently reminds us of this) and become a self-made millionaire. Everything about him is American: his face, his voice, his background. He speaks of his average boyhood in an average family in an average home. He enjoys tennis, playing the drums, doing magical tricks—that's American.

He is a good sport, willing to try anything once: falling off a ladder, handling a snake, getting drenched in water. He is not afraid to appear ridiculous—that's American.

He is kind and decent to children and old ladies—that's American.

He keeps abreast of the news, is mildly liberal, purposely anti-intellectual—that's American.

At the peak of his career in his late 50s, he is youthful, energetic, physically fit—that's American.

Even his name is an American-boy name: not John, not Jack, but Johnny. He is the grown-up white-haired adolescent, given to funny hats and sophomoric horseplay. Even his corn is American corn. Yet he can be serious when necessary, courteous, cool, controlled. He knows his own limitations; he himself says he is not William Buckley, nor does he mean to be. A Russian lady of my acquaintance once returned from a movie starring Goldie Hawn, shaking her head in disapproval: "Not Tolstoy," she announced. Johnny knows exactly who he is and what is expected of him.

He has kept pace with the enormous social changes in this country in the last 20 years. Grown older, he has grown bolder; as sexual taboos have relaxed, he has become more permissively risqué. His is the naughty innuendo, the unvoiced snicker, the single-entendre, the blush that isn't there. To know the score, to be with it, and yet not to offend—that's American, too.

His success is due in great measure to his quick wit, his ability to seize absurdity and run with it. He is Johnny-on-the-spot with an instant retort. His timing and delivery are expert. His face speaks more eloquently than his writers' scripted words. He is a master of the slow take, the mock-affronted expression, the blank stare at the camera. He is a fine mimic and impersonator; his Reagan is as good as they come. →

Another reason for his longevity is the familiar format of his show. Here familiarity breeds content: his audience knows what's in store, at the same time hoping for something unpredictable to happen, which occasionally does. Johnny is as likely as not to remove his pants, cut off his tie, tear up the script and throw it over his shoulder.

It works, as does the smooth teamwork of his triumvirate: Ed McMahon, the big, jovial, drinking Irishman, whose loud, contagious laugh leads all the rest and who serves as the perfect foil for Johnny. Doc Severinsen, trumpeter and musical director, Johnny's sartorial antithesis, with his way-out clothes and his way-out humor. Tommy (not Thomas; we are all youngsters here!) Newsom, sweet scapegoat, the butt of some of Johnny's unkindest jibes at his presumably colorless personality. Tommy's smiling dignity saves them from bad taste and allows the audience to identify with the underdog. Tommy, too, has his own brand of understated humor. An example from a recent show, when Doc was away:

Johnny: "How come you are standing with your arms folded like that? Doc never does."

Tommy: "Someone has to."

Each of the three knows by heart his assigned role in the nightly spontaneity.

So does Johnny. The moment Big Ed announces: "Heeeere's Johnny!" and the multicolored drapes part, Johnny emerges (What is he wearing tonight?), impeccably groomed, conservatively tailored, elegant. Amid wild applause, hysterical screams and whistles of the faithful, prompted by either his appearance or the applause sign, Johnny stands, pretending to be embarrassed by their enthusiasm, with an almost "Aw, shucks, folks" manner, but not quite; his studied shyness and boyish grin are tempered by a cool sophistication. Ed and Doc clasp their hands and bow in reverential obeisance, which Johnny acknowledges and begins his opening monologue.

This is often the best part of the show; it's the voice of Middle America. He comments on topical and local events, criticizing what is currently safe and popular to criticize: the postal service, British royalty, air pollution and our own Government, which he claims is his best source of humor. His political comments are irreverent without being rebellious or abrasive. They are not to be underestimated. His bite is often sharper than his barb; his barbs are pointed, but not poisonous. His accurate gauge of the country's political climate keeps him from taking risks; he avoids extreme positions.

He is equally sensitive to his audience in the studio and, by extension, at home. He establishes immediate rapport with it; he plays with the audience, shares with the audience, takes it into his confidence. The audience becomes part of the act. It recognizes and responds to his key phrases. It delights in his familiar mannerisms: tie-touching, eye-rubbing, pencil-flipping; the karate chop to stop the orchestra; the golf stroke to signify the end of the monologue. He knows the people watching him are aware of his personal problems, his marital woes, though he never discusses them on the air; and they know that he knows that they know, so a slightly raised eyebrow or a throwaway comment on the high cost of cat food is all that is necessary for the instant, sympathetic laugh.

When the audience groans in unison at a joke that falls flat, he not only retrieves the joke, but juggles it for added laughs.

Though taped, his show seems to be happening here and now, at a private party where we meet some interesting or amusing people who would never otherwise enter our homes. Sometimes the party is successful, sometimes dull, but it is always effortless. We can leave at any time without offending anyone just by touching the dial.

Johnny is the perfect host, always in control. No one can spill soup on his tablecloth, though if a gauche guest does, Johnny at once turns it into a soup-spilling skit. He is at his best when his guest is good; when his own unscripted wit is matched to his guest's and often saves the day—or the hour. His guests, no doubt carefully selected and screened, consist of actors, kooks and zanies, trainers of exotic animals, singers, comics, starlets, eccentric doctors, popular astronomers, lively octogenarians, precocious children, assorted celebrities who come to plug their wares, and people in the news—but no one too controversial; no one who might threaten the low-key humor of the program.

Johnny knows instinctively what his audience wants to know, and he listens, really listens, to his guests. He is respectful to celebrities without being deferential; he is kind to his guests without being sentimental. He doesn't compete with them, but tries to bring out the best in the dullest. Like Shakespeare's Falstaff, he is not only witty in himself, but "the cause that wit is in other men." If a guest is dull beyond rescue, there seems to be off stage an unseen, swift vaudevillian hook: a sudden commercial, during which the guest disappears.

Sometimes an unknown singer or comedian is given a chance, truly the chance of a lifetime, since a few minutes on The Tonight Show can launch an important career. Johnny wields enormous power.

Television is a giant maw that devours tons of material daily. Aiming to please all and to antagonize none, Johnny is of necessity uneven. His frequently trenchant political comments appeal to one segment of his audience, while his silly costumes and slapstick skits appeal to another. Johnny's brow is very middle.

It's a thin line that divides good taste from vulgarity, spontaneity from foolishness; sometimes Johnny oversteps this boundary. He seems to be fond of his "Carnac the Magnificent" and "The Mighty Carson Art Players," which I find tedious. His rehearsed programs are seldom as amusing as his own asides. I think "The Edge of Wetness," his heavy-handed attempt to parody TV soap operas in a town called "Sludge Falls," is deplorable. Here the camera moves in on the faces of the audience, while Johnny narrates their fictitious lives in a manner so close to insulting that I'm surprised the audience allows this. I'm even more surprised that Johnny allows—or encourages—his writers to involve him in anything so tasteless. As for "The Best of Carson," it sometimes turns out to be the worst of Carson, since it consists of reruns of old programs, and nothing is staler than yesterday's news. A flip reference to the living Grace Kelly after her tragic death; a discussion of the British royal wedding long after Di had a baby, or of Carter as the current President makes me feel embarrassed and cheated; it's like having to eat cold leftovers.

The hour of The Tonight Show no doubt contributes to its success. It is aired in the evening, after dinner, after the heavy TV news of murders and massacres, when the viewer, often in bed but not yet ready for sleep, is eager for a bit of light entertainment, innocent tomfoolery and bright chitchat. It's talk to relax by; it requires no thinking. Johnny himself appears relaxed and easy, though on occasion he betrays an edginess that is dangerously taut.

His warm charm and ready wit are apparent in his specials, where he is the urbane emcee at big events, such as the Academy Awards. But I saw this façade disappear during an interview by Barbara Walters, in which he looked tired, aging, disillusioned, as he cautiously pussyfooted around his answers, spouting jejune clichés. He is obviously uncomfortable when not on his own turf.

That he has managed to survive for so long is one of the most interesting things about prankish, puckish Johnny. We have been a part of his survival; we made him, he is ours. What makes Johnny run is what makes Johnny fun: an amalgam of personality traits, talents, teamwork, and a carefully manufactured and maintained public image that has become the man himself. As long as he makes his audiences laugh at what they consider funny and dares to criticize what they would like to, he will continue to be No. 1, the King of Talk Shows, the nice boy from Nebraska who made good, but real good, in the Big City of America. (END)

Will You Have Your Burger Commercial Rare—or Well-Done?

Richard Newton

For Wendy's, McDonald's and Burger King, those catchy ads mean lots of thick, juicy profits

By Rod Townley

Walter Mondale may demand to know where it is. Gary Hart may retort that he's got it. George McGovern may try to conciliate by saying both men have enough of it "if they don't turn each other into hamburger."

But we won't say it. It's gone far enough. Where's the relief?

For readers who've been away studying penguins on Tierra del Fuego for the past few months, we should explain that Wendy's International has launched a phenomenally popular ad campaign for its hamburgers. A diminutive octogenarian named Clara Peller bellows the now-famous tag line in a voice like the Queen Mary's foghorn.

That phrase (which we refuse to repeat) has taken on a life of its own, asserts Joe Mack, executive vice-president of Dancer Fitzgerald Sample, the agency that created the ad. "It's come to mean 'Where's the substance? Where's the action? I want my money's worth.' It's the victim striking back."

Perhaps because of this underdog appeal (and the boost inadvertently given it by the Democratic Presidential hopefuls), Miss Peller's jarring question could appear on $50-million worth of merchandise this year, from T-shirts to posters to hamburger-shaped bubble gum. The "WTB" line is already a trademark of Wendy's and Miss Peller will get a percentage of merchandising profits. She may never have to work again.

With 2600 stateside restaurants, Wendy's still trails Burger King (with 3600) and McDonald's (a whopping 6300 in the U.S.). Those oversized competitors profess indifference to Wendy's modest ($19 million) TV campaign featuring the 4-foot-10-inch, 82-year-old Peller. "We wouldn't have used those gnome-like creatures," avers John Weir, public-relations director for Burger King. "Some of these Wendy's people are really creeps . . . not the people you want to be rubbing elbows with for your Saturday Whopper."

McDonald's spokesman Bob Keyser is less colorful in his response: "We don't feel it's necessary to continually react to the competitive machinations in the industry." So there, Clara.

McDonald's, in fact, has turned not reacting to competitors into a policy. When you're No. 1, after all, you don't talk about (or do ads confronting) No. 2 or 3. Tough head-to-head comparative advertising is the underdog's weapon. It may be hard to think of Burger King as an underdog, with over $3 billion in sales in 23 countries in 1983. But McDonald's, with 17 million customers a day, rang up $8.7 billion that same year. (Wendy's limped along with $1.9 billion, Hardee's with $1.5 billion.)

On September 27, 1982, the underdog bit back. That's when Burger King fired off the first volley of satirical comparative ads and started The War Between the Steaks. While McDonald's cozied up to viewers with "You deserve a break today" commercials, followed by the equally heartwarming "McDonald's and you" ads, Burger King turned up the heat with its flame-broiled-versus-fried campaign and the slogan, "The switch is on." Among the most memorable Burger King spots was one showing the MacDonald family of Norwalk, Conn., all in Groucho Marx disguises (even the dog!), confessing their switch from McDonald's to BK. Other ads showed little Emmanuel Lewis, now of Webster, chirping the virtues of flame-broiling. (He's been brought back this year to continue grilling the competition.) →

Soon McDonald's became embroiled in controversy, suing Burger King over its claims. "A big mistake," says Dave Vadehra of Video Storyboard Tests, Inc. The suit was settled out of court and the fracas gave Burger King (by some estimates) $30 million in free publicity.

BK's John Weir contrasts McDonald's "warm fuzzies" (heart-tugging image ads) with Burger King's "velvet-fist" approach. "Ours is soft on the outside, but there's a real hard message in it," he says. The results: an average 15-per-cent annual increase in business over the past two years. Although McDonald's claims a respectable 11-per-cent increase in worldwide sales during 1983, its actual per-unit increase was only 5.3 per cent, down from nearly 10 per cent in 1978. When you get too big you tend to get sluggish, critics claim.

And jittery. In the fall of 1981, McDonald's fired the agency, Needham, Harper & Steers, whose exceptional ads had done much to create the McDonald's image, and hired the firm of Leo Burnett Co. "An unadulterated disaster," pronounces Dave Vadehra. "McDonald's current breakfast ad is worse than the one they had three years ago."

At one point, worried about negative public perceptions of McDonald's quality, Leo Burnett brought in the redoubtable John Houseman to affirm McDonald's commitment to excellence. But seeing Houseman in McDonald's seemed startlingly incongruous, as if he'd wandered into the wrong commercial and might start growling that McDonald's makes food the old-fashioned way: they burn it. The ad had a brief run.

Meanwhile, McDonald's competitors continue to circle, nipping at the McShins of the mammoth company. One vulnerable spot might be menu variety. McDonald's has kept to a relatively simple menu. But Wendy's, for instance, has been touting taco salads, French toast (in a few outlets) and stuffed baked potatoes (of which they sell 600,000 a day); and Burger King recently concluded a $20-million salad campaign on TV.

All the attacks on Mac, however, have not proven fatal, or even particularly dangerous. The No. 1 Bun opened more than 500 new outlets worldwide in 1983 and spent more than $400 million on advertising, $186 million of it on TV. Burger King spent $82.5 million on TV, Wendy's a mere $49.7 million.

And now McDonald's has launched a whole new campaign, replacing the 15-month-old "McDonald's and you" theme with a "more contemporary and upbeat" refrain: "It's a good time for the great taste of McDonald's." Although avoiding the tough comparative approach of its rivals, McDonald's is livening up the proceedings: using break-dancing sequences in some spots and the Puerto Rican pop group Menudo in others.

Some critics question whether the new theme is any zippier than the old. Certainly it lacks the rough-edged panache of Clara Peller's war cry for Wendy's. But even if the new McDonald's campaign is less provocative, it will probably sell a lot more hamburgers. Which is why every gladiator on the burger battlefield will be eyeing the new campaign very carefully. "McDonald's is like sleeping with an elephant," says Burger King's John Weir. "Every time they roll over, you have to watch out."

Finally, you look beyond specific battle plans, sneak attacks and media campaigns to ask, Who's winning the war? The answer, not surprisingly, is—everyone. Sales by the big three are increasing steadily. Hardee's (which acquired the Burger Chef line a while back) is "definitely in an expansion mode," according to a spokesman, and has just launched its first national TV campaign. Arby's is using a homey approach. And The Original Hamburger Stand is endearing itself to cost-conscious folks with its no-frills burgers.

But consider. Once everybody's found the elusive beef—and the pickles and relish and fries—they're going to want something else. Could it be that the biggest winner of all in the burger wars is—Alka-Seltzer? END

How the simple exchange of information will be turned into an electrifying Olympic event.

Events at 23 separate locations, stretched over 4,500 square miles. Participants from 153 countries, speaking over 50 languages, housed at three Olympic villages. Obviously, the movement of information may be the most intricate and demanding event at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

To meet these extraordinary demands, AT&T has created a highly advanced electronic messaging system. It's an unprecedented combination of computer software and lightwave technologies. Yet it incorporates the same features of reliability and ease of use that the American public has come to expect of its phone system.

With this unique system, the 50,000 members of the Olympic family will have instant access to all event results and schedules within a minute. Each of them will even have an electronic mailbox, so they can send messages to one another. And the electronic messaging system will give journalists connections from 60 Olympic sites to news bureaus all over the world.

AT&T TELECOMMUNICATIONS SPONSOR 1984 OLYMPICS

At the heart of the system are 12 of our UNIX™ System V-based 3B20 super minicomputers. Linked into one of the world's largest Local Area Networks. One that operates at 10 megabits per second. And WESTERN ELECTRIC® Fiber Optics Products tie over 1,700 Teletype® display terminals and printers into the system.

From data pool to swimming pool, we will always be up for the competition.

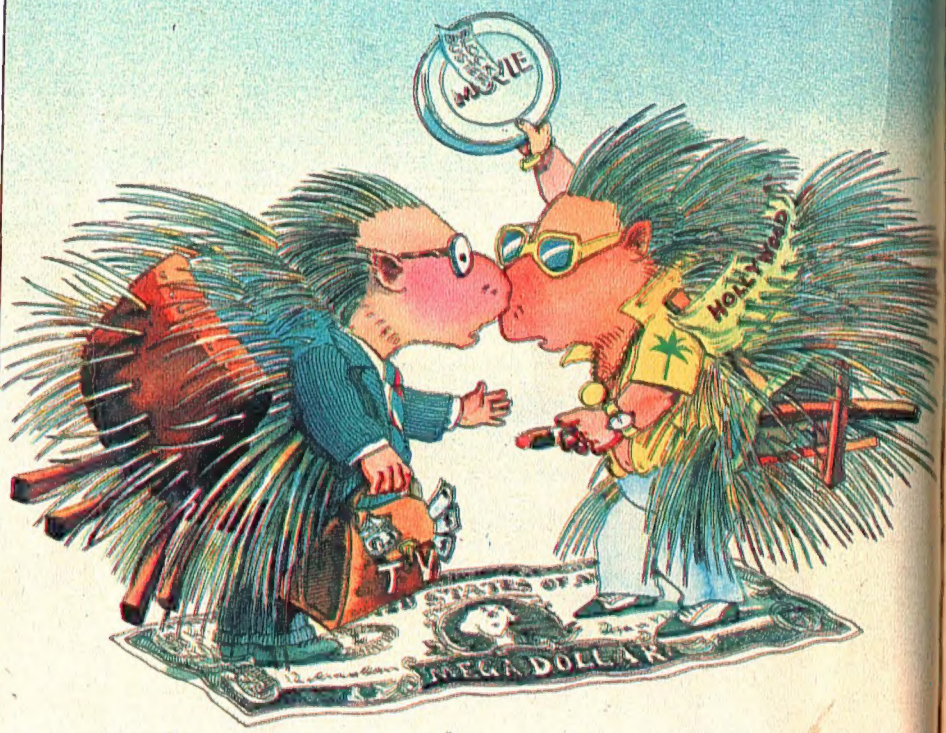
With huge sums now at stake in selling movies to video, marketers must negotiate as delicately as...

Two Porcupines About to Embrace



Michael Foreman

By Kenneth Turan

It is a multimillion-dollar enterprise where, as one confounded veteran puts it, "There are no rules and no exceptions." It is so changeable a venture that "nobody really knows how to handle it." "Normal, what's normal?" adds a harried colleague. "I find out every day how much I don't know."

The business in question is officially known as the sale of motion-picture ancillary rights or, in less formal terms, the various ways movies get from the big screen of theaters to the small screen at home: videocassettes, pay-TV systems, the networks, local stations and the rest. It is a process that involves, besides all that money, a raft of arcane terms like made-fors, pre-buys and the ever-popular "proper sequence of windows." And it has become so fearfully complex that even a highly experienced practitioner like Kevin O'Sullivan, chairman of Worldvision Enterprises, Inc., one of the leading distributors of programming to television, wryly notes that "with the proliferation of these technologies, the marketer must go at it like porcupines making love: very carefully."

Sitting in his tasteful mauve-and-gray office in the Century City area of Los Angeles, William A. Shields has the air of a man with a mission. He is executive vice-president, worldwide marketing and acquisitions, for New World Pictures, once owned by exploitation wizard Roger Corman and currently in the process of building itself into major-studio status. Shields' job includes the selling of ancillary rights, and the picture he is concentrating on now, early in January 1984, two months ahead of its March theatrical release, is Stephen King's "Children of the Corn," a bump-in-the-night story of devil worship in the bucolic Midwest. "The projections are very high for this, with a very good upside and a very low downside," he says, meaning that the fact that "every one of Stephen King's pictures to date has done business," coupled with "Corn" 's modest $3-$3.5-million budget, almost assures its fiscal success.

Though "Corn" is not yet in its finished form, that has not hampered Shields from having long since begun his sales routine, the first steps of which are calling up potential buyers in all markets and extolling the virtues of the upcoming product. "The process is the same in each case: you play it up, you screen it, you negotiate it," says David Forbes, a producer's representative and motion-picture marketing consultant. And since this is Hollywood—the only place, as Los Angeles Times film writer Dale Pollock puts it, "where you can conclude a handshake deal over the phone"—much of the negotiating occurs, he says, in a pair of time-honored venues: "the phone and the lunch."

When buyers and sellers of film talk about each potential market, the word they use is "window," the idea being that you maximize the amount of money you get from each window before allowing the film to proceed to the next one; the better the picture is, the longer it takes to get to each succeeding window. The first window after theatrical release is, for obvious reasons, sale to the videocassette market; if you sold to home cable first, clever folk would tape the films themselves and have no need to buy the cassettes.

A phenomenally successful film like "Raiders of the Lost Ark," for instance, didn't get into video until two and a half years after its theatrical release, and only then because it provided a convenient marketing tool for Paramount, which tacked a teaser to the sequel, "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," onto the cassette. On the other hand, sometimes it is advantageous, in Shields' words, "to be as close to the theatrical date as possible, which allows the cassette to feed off the theatrical advertising." "Terms of Endearment" was in VCR format barely two months after winning a slew of Oscars, and "Flashdance" was in cassette five months after its theatrical release.

It is this particular window (which, in general, begins roughly six months after a film's theatrical opening and lasts for six months) that industry savants be- → lieve holds the key to the fiscal future. "It will overtake cable," Shields says flatly, "as a film's biggest source of revenue after theaters." The VCR population in this country increased in 1983 from 5.4 million units to 9.5 million, and by the end of 1984 it could escalate to 16.5 million, or nearly 20 per cent of all TV households. These figures are reflected in the increasingly large advances motion pictures are getting from cassette manufacturers: $1.6-million was reportedly paid for "Silkwood," $2.7 million for the forthcoming "Santa Claus—The Movie," and an offer of $10 million for the rights to "E.T." was made and turned down.

Despite these large figures, many films are sold to cassette in groups, the prevailing wisdom being, in David Forbes' words, "unless it's 'Gone With the Wind,' you don't take it out by itself." New World put "Children of the Corn" in a package with three other films, none of the others particularly big names, and began shopping it around.

And since those multimillion-dollar figures are advances against future royalties (the studio generally gets between 20 and 30 per cent of the wholesale cassette price), New World was not so much interested in a huge advance as in a company that "had a comprehensive marketing plan, because with this film we feel we will be in overages; in other words, we think our percentage of the total sales will be greater than what we get as an advance." The group finally chosen was Embassy Home Video, one of the industry's pioneers, which had successfully delivered overages on two previous New World pictures.

The next major window is the one for pay-TV services, primarily Home Box Office, with its more than 13.5 million subscribers and 60 per cent of the pay audience, and its main rival, Showtime/The Movie Channel. This is generally a one-year window, and it is in many ways the trickiest to sell. For one thing, the fee negotiated is not an advance against future royalties, as with cassettes, but rather a single-payment license fee (though there often are escalators included in the deal, raising the price if the film does above certain levels at the box office or wins Academy Awards). Also confusing is that while Showtime/TMC and the smaller pay outfits, like ON TV and Prism, buy the rights to some films for a flat fee, they acquire others on a per-subscriber basis. HBO, the industry giant, insists on paying a flat fee and is too big to argue with.

Adding to the complexities is that the pay-cable situation, as Shields explains, "is in such an incredible state of flux right now it makes everything difficult." For a while, HBO, fortified by its unequaled collection of pre-buys (films to which it had purchased the cable rights before the camera rolled), worshiped at the shrine of exclusivity. But then rival Showtime/TMC purchased the exclusive rights to most of Paramount's pictures for the next five years for an estimated half a billion dollars, and suddenly, says Shields, "the philosophy now is to move away from exclusivity," which suited his plan, to sell "Children of the Corn" to both companies, just perfectly.

The negotiations New World entered into with both systems, Shields explains, are not take-it-or-leave-it situations. "It's more like selling a house, a going back and forth. As sellers, we take the tack that this is a picture they must have, and that they have to pay us a license fee that is commensurate. As buyers, they don't want to look too anxious; they're putting up as many obstacles as possible. They question the level of business, they point to films that have done more, they say, 'We're not sure'."

This process can be an arduous one ("You have to have a leather skin," says Jerry Harvey, who, as programming director, buys films for Los Angeles's highly regarded Z Channel), and to flourish in it, it is necessary to be what is known as a good closer. "A lot of times people will get the interest level up but be unable to close all the details of a deal," Shields says. "You can flounder along and forget you have other pictures to sell." Fi- →

Should Senate Proceedings Be Televised?

Some critics claim that allowing TV cameras on the Senate floor would lead to "showboating" and a lack of decorum. Others think the proceedings are intrinsically tedious. Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. disagrees. He argues the case for video coverage of the Senate at its contentious best.

The Last Laugh?

Imagine a world without poverty, violence ...or the half-hour sitcom. They're facts of life. Right? Well, the prime-time facts are changing. And unless the networks take some different strokes, the happy days of the sitcom, as we know it, may be over for good. Find out why.

nally, in early April, a month after the film's release, the sale of "Children of the Corn" to HBO was consummated at a long, three-hour lunch at a restaurant near the New World offices, and very shortly afterward a similar deal was cut with Showtime/The Movie Channel. Was it a memorable moment? "I don't forget any deals that I make," Shields said with finality. Although he won't say how much New World got for "Corn," sources within the industry estimate that HBO and Cinemax paid under $500,000; Showtime/TMC, $350,000; and over-the-air subscription-TV outlets, $100,000—for a total of almost $1 million.

Athough "Children of the Corn" 's 18-month pay-TV window will not begin until January 1985, Shields says plans will already be under way before then for a network-TV sale, a process that has become extremely chancy. Recent evidence suggests that, because of their cassette and pay-TV exposure, blockbuster films no longer draw network viewers the way they used to, the public hungering instead for "made-fors," films that are made by the networks for a TV audience, cost less, feature salable TV stars and get as good or better ratings than their theatrical brethren. While the first network showing of "Jaws" (on ABC in 1979) drew a 39 rating and a 57 share, "Star Wars" ' 1984 network debut (on CBS) drew only a 25.1 rating and a 35 share and was beaten by the ABC TV-movie "Lace." A theatrical movie, ABC Entertainment president Lewis Erlicht has said, has become "like watching people swallow fish; it just doesn't play any more." From the other side of the table, Ned Tanen, former head of Universal Pictures, agrees that "the network-TV business is nonexistent unless you have a movie they want—Burt Reynolds or Clint Eastwood. Otherwise you can't give it to them."

New World's Shields is well aware of this trend, but he also knows how fast trends can reverse. "The networks are second- and third-guessing themselves now; like the other ancillary markets, they're in a fast-changing position," he explains. "Some people are convinced 'made-fors' are better, but a couple of big theatrical features could change that philosophy."

After the potential network sale, "Children of the Corn" will be made available to local TV stations in a process still called syndication even though genuine syndication, developed in the 1950s to enable local stations to actually underwrite the cost of series production, is no longer in vogue. Many of the major studios have an entire subsidiary organization devoted to this kind of distribution, but New World sends its films out through Worldvision, which takes as its fee a percentage of the revenue it collects.

By general agreement, the Nation's local stations are divided into some 250 markets, from biggies like New York to the likes of Dothan, Ala., and, according to Worldvision chairman Kevin O'Sullivan, "If we went around schlepping one movie at a time, we'd be wasting time and energy." So films are sold in groups as large as 30, and since it takes time to assemble a package that sizable, a picture may have to stay on hold for two or three years, "waiting to get on the streetcar."

It used to be that this kind of syndication was the end of the line for a movie, and the window could last five years, 10 years or longer, but now, says O'Sullivan, new technologies have given these films the potential for extended life. They can ping-pong back and forth among competing media, going back to pay-cable, for instance, after syndication. In response to that situation, companies like Worldvision are attempting to build uniform, nationwide expiration dates into their contracts so that one outstanding license to a station in Paducah, Ky., can't hold up a major sale.

"If you're not analytical and objective in studying your markets, you may miss one somewhere," O'Sullivan explains. "I've been in this business a long time, and it's really getting wild. Nobody knows where the hell this thing is going to be in 10 years. It's like throwing cold cuts to a lion; it's an insatiable maw." END
